MASSAGE THERAPY

Come home to your body.

where an artist's eye meets healing hands

An artist's eye, healing hands.

You're safe here. Let's slow down together.

itz_litny began the way most good things do — quietly, and from the inside out. Brittany is a newly-credentialed massage therapist who came to bodywork already fluent in another language: color, intuition, and the slow craft of making something with her hands.

That artist's sensibility is the whole point. She reads a body the way a painter reads a canvas — noticing where the light gathers, where the tension lives, what wants to soften next. The result is bodywork that feels composed rather than clinical: unhurried, attentive, and entirely yours.

This book holds the brand that grew from that practice — the words, the colors, and the feeling we return to every time. A genuine safe space, translated into a system.

“Healing doesn’t have to be earned — it’s already yours.”

THE FEELING

Natural · organic · holistic. Calm, nurturing, meditative.

THE PROMISE

Sixty minutes that belong entirely to you.

Why we do this.

To offer a genuine safe space where rest is not a reward but a return — bodywork that helps you come home to your body, exactly as it is today.

01

Safety first

The room, the touch, the pace — all built so your nervous system can finally exhale.

02

Unhurried care

Time is the medicine. We never rush a body toward someone else's clock.

03

An artist's attention

Intuition and craft. We read what's there and respond, rather than apply a script.

04

Self-love, embodied

Healing as something already yours — not earned, not performed, just received.

For the ones ready to soften.

itz_litny is for people who suspect that rest is allowed — and want a practitioner who treats it that way. Different bodies, one shared wish: to feel at home again.

The over-carried

Caregivers, parents, and the quietly depleted who give all day and rarely receive. Here, you're the one being held.

The reawakening

Anyone reconnecting with their body after stress, burnout, or a long stretch of just getting through. We start gently.

The expecting

Prenatal clients who want supported, knowledgeable, deeply comfortable care through a changing body.

The seekers

Wellness-minded folks drawn to natural, holistic, intuitive care — and to a space that feels like art, not a clinic.

“Whoever you are when you walk in, you’re welcome to set it all down.”

How we sound.

Warm, grounded, unhurried, affirming. Always second person, present tense.
Embodied, sensory language — never clinical, never salesy.

PERSONALITY DIALS

WE ARE

Do

- “You’re safe here. Let’s slow down together.”
- “Sixty minutes that belong entirely to you.”
- Speak to the person, in the present:
you feel, you rest, you arrive.
- Use the body and the senses — breath, warmth, weight, ease.

Don’t

- “Book now — limited slots, don’t miss out!”
- “Our modalities target myofascial dysfunction.”
- Don’t shout, upsell, or manufacture urgency.
- Don’t sound clinical, generic, or like everyone else.

The mark.

A single monoline gesture: an abstract leaf and lotus that doubles as a soft water droplet — a quiet nod to Brittany's Aquarius nature. Growth and water, in one breath.

MASSAGE THERAPY

Clear space

Keep at least the height of the droplet clear on every side.

Mono — ink

One-color Forest Ink for stamps & fine print.

Reversed

Oat Milk on Eucalyptus for dark surfaces.

On color

Stays legible on warm accent fields.

Favicon

Reduces cleanly to 16 px.

Don't

No stretching, recoloring off-palette, or shadows.

A palette that breathes.

Warm neutrals to rest on, sage and eucalyptus to ground, clay for warmth, and a healing teal that carries the water. Lots of Oat Milk between everything.

-  Lead with Oat Milk & Warm Sand. Let them hold most of the space.
-  Use Sage / Eucalyptus for structure, headings, and the mark.
-  Clay & Teal are accents — small doses, never the whole room.

Type that slows you down.

Photography direction.

Soft natural light, warm neutrals, generous negative space. Hands, linen, plants, stones, candlelight, skin texture. Tender and human — never harsh or clinical.

Blocks below are placeholders; Brittany's approved photos drop into the labeled slots.

Lean in warm light, shallow focus, calm hands, breathing room, real texture.

Avoid cool blue tones, clutter, stock-y poses, harsh flash, anything sterile.

The menu.

Choose by feeling, not jargon. Every session is tailored once you're on the table.

Pricing is placeholder — Brittany sets final rates.
